WORLD EXCLUSIVE
VIOLIN PLAYED AS TITANIC SANK
SOLD FOR $1.7 MILLION

Now – December, 2020

at Titanic Museum Attraction in Pigeon Forge

Pigeon Forge, Tenn. – RMS Titanic bandleader Wallace Hartley’s violin, which sold for $1.7 million dollars, the highest price ever paid for any RMS Titanic artifact, has only been seen in public in two places, The Titanic Museum Attractions in Branson MO. & Pigeon Forge, TN.

Now this silent witness of the Titanic disaster is set to kick-off Titanic Pigeon Forge’s new 2020 summer season with an exclusive, encore engagement, now – December, 2020, announces, President, COO and Co-Owner, Mary Kellogg.

“The Hartley Titanic violin is the single most requested and important artifact our visitors have asked to see again. I really feel that’s because this fragile reminder of Titanic’s final moments plays on untapped emotions that touch the heart,” says Mary Kellogg. “We are grateful and honored to be chosen, above all others, to display this extraordinary piece of Titanic history... and we thank Henry Aldridge and Sons in England, representatives of the anonymous owner, for trusting us with this prized possession.

In 2005 the Hartley Titanic violin was found and authenticated through testing. It was later sold at auction by Henry Aldridge and Son for $1,700,000, by far the highest ever paid for memorabilia tied to Titanic. “I can’t think of anything else that is more iconic to come off that ship,” says veteran collector & attorney, Craig Sopin.

*Some will hear its silent message.
All will feel a presence that’s impossible to ignore*
